

The NeighborSpace opinion forum is no longer online.

What follows is an excerpt which was posted in NeighborSpace in the section NeighborSpace>Community Issues>City Hall & Governance Issues>Palo Alto

Ariel Calonne - 09:21am Apr 5, 2002 PST (#3 of 7)

Vehicles on Private Property

Thanks for the support Annette.

Natalie, the ordinance doesn't relax existing noise rules. It may well be a good idea to add some language cross-referencing the noise rules so folks don't infer a relaxation. The staff report going to the PC encourages the commission to address the auto repair noise issue.

The 30 day live-in-your-RV standard is outdated. No one ever applies and it is too long anyhow, IMHO, and based on surrounding community standards.

Anyhow, we're trying to make things better. Help us get there. Lance Bayer is going to be working more for us, so we're going to be doing more enforcement.

Incidentally, thanks in good part to Tom Ashton's efforts on visibility, we've now filed a criminal complaint on a nuisance landscaping violation on Eldorado.

Keep yelling at me if you feel the need. I am bound and determined to get it right eventually!

---

annette glanckopf - 03:00pm Apr 6, 2002 PST (#4 of 7)

Welcome Ariel, Good to see you in N/S and thanks for your comment!

Re visibility, I would like to see the 35' visibility triangle be in force for every intersection, not just the controlled ones. Any chance?

Lance has been very responsive on the urban blight issue. He has convinced me that in the old days the "current" ordinance never had language that was broad enough from enforcement side. So it time to clean up the code, so we can protect our residents. I agree with the point that it would be helpful to add some wording on noise rules.